Epirus Riviera -

The Marinas of Epirus Gain New Momentum Through the Igoumenitsa Port Authority

Epirus is not only a destination of authentic natural beauty and exceptional gastronomy. It is also emerging as a growing maritime destination for sea tourism, with modern infrastructure and a strategic development plan that strengthens the region's connection to the Ionian Sea and the Mediterranean. At the heart of this effort is the Igoumenitsa Port Authority, which is dynamically investing in the upgrade and development of the tourist boat shelters it manages at key locations across Thesprotia.

The marinas and boat shelters in Syvota, Plataria, and Sagiada now form an integrated network of tourist harbors offering safe mooring, easy access, and high-quality services for recreational vessels and visitors from Greece and abroad. With approximately 300 berths in total, these facilities significantly enhance the tourism footprint of the region while creating new growth opportunities for local communities.

Syvota, one of the most popular seaside destinations in Western Greece, combines a cosmopolitan atmosphere with unparalleled natural beauty, attracting high-end visitors and strengthening the region's yachting profile. Plataria, thanks to the natural protection of its bay and its picturesque setting, is an ideal stop for sailing boats and motor yachts cruising the Ionian Sea. At the same time, Sagiada is gradually emerging as an alternative destination with authentic character and significant development potential.

The I.P.A.'s strategy goes beyond infrastructure management alone. Through a broader sustainable development plan, the Igoumenitsa Port Authority S.A. is investing in green practices, digital services, and the overall enhancement of the boating experience, aiming to establish the marinas of Epirus as a reference point for maritime tourism in Northwestern Greece.

At the same time, the geographical position of Igoumenitsa and its strong ferry connections with Italy and the Ionian islands, further reinforce the importance of the region's marina network. The combination of easy accessibility, natural wealth and modern services, creates a competitive tourism product that meets the expectations of today's traveler.

At a time, when maritime tourism is becoming a key driver of growth for the Greek economy, the Igoumenitsa Port Authority demonstrates that Epirus can claim a leading role on the map of yachting and modern marinas in the Mediterranean.
